

Who's Who Continued...

Mary Orr was born and raised on Long Island, NY, and has an undergraduate degree in Speech and Theatre. She has been involved with community theatres for over 30 years including theatres in Topeka, Wamego, Emporia, Atchison and Lawrence Kansas. Since moving to Bozeman three years ago Mary has performed with Open Door Theater and at The Verge. She is a board member of ODT and was most recently seen as Emma in Over the River and Through the Woods.

Liz Preston graduated from the Montana State University School of Film and Photography in 2015 and is now the Marketing Designer for Bridger Steel. After making her short film, The Fire and the Rose, she is excited to be making the switch to theater, and hopes you enjoy these three fabulous one act plays!

Christopher Schiller is a second-year earth science Ph.D. student studying the historical vegetation and hydrothermal activity of Yellowstone National Park. Just ask him about the variety of forms in fossil pollen! He has been in student comedy and musical productions with the Hardrockin' Drama Club in Rapid City, SD. Most recently, he played a variety of roles in The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe with the Magenta Theatre in Vancouver, WA. Chris is also a frequent performer with the MSU Something Funny Improv club.

David Shields is a frequent member of the Bozeman poetry community and is excited to be acting in Honyockers as Jason.

Logan Sigler is an 8th grader at Sacajawea Middle School, and I'm am thrilled to have this role in Something I'll Tell You Tuesday. This is an amazing opportunity to follow my passion for the arts and to nurture my interests as an actress, singer, and writer. My supportive family has helped me every step of the way, so I'd like to thank them, and Mary Orr for putting on this fun and educational production!

Marjorie Smith has been active in live theatre, onstage and backstage, for 60 years (gasp!) in theatre groups in Bozeman, Denver, Massachusetts, Guam, Bangkok and Japan. In 2014 she was a founding board member of Open Door Theatre. As someone who has written and directed plays herself, she is thrilled to bring Liz Preston's and Kelly Simmons' complicated character to life on this stage.

Roerick Sweeney moved to Bozeman for school 9 years ago and is now happily stuck here. He is a comedian, writer, musician, actor, and now a director. Previous appearances with Open Door were Exit the Body and Over the River and Through the Woods. A web developer, he has a crippling addiction to Korean food.

Tyler Weil has acted in many plays. He was Juror 2 in Twelve Angry Men, and he played Cliff in Crazy 8s. In his spare time, he is a Professional Wizard and an amateur improv performer. "I am what I am... which is a deathray."
